A gentleman who lately travelled through New Jersey assured us that among many hundred persons with whom he conversed about the federal government, he met but one man who was opposed to it, and he was a citizen of Pennsylvania and an intimate friend of the head of the Antifederal Junto.