Thomas B. Wait to George Thatcher, Portland 8 January 1788 (excerpt)

. . . There is a certain darkness, duplicity and studied ambiguity of expression runing thro' the whole Constitution which renders a Bill of Rights peculiarly necessary.—As it now stands but very few individuals do, or ever will understand it.—Consequently, Congress will be its own interpreter—The article respecting taxation and representation is neither more or less than a puzling Cap; and you, my friend, had the pleasure of wearing it, at my office, an hour or two—and then pulled it off, just as wise as when you put it on.—But you will now perhaps tell me that you can explain it entirely to my satisfaction—possibly you can; but that may not happen completely to satisfy Congress—if it should not, why they will put a different one,—one that may not satisfy either you or me—But Some persons have guessed the meaning to be this—that taxation and representation should be in proportion to all the freemen and slaves in each state—counting five of the latter to three of the former—If these were the ideas of the Convention, what a strange collection of words do we find in the Constitution to express them!—Who, in the name of God, but the majority of that honl. body, would ever have tho't of expressing like ideas in like words!—But bad as may be the mode of expression, the ideas, in my opinion, are worse—

By this interpretation the article in question is an egregious imposition on the northern states—Tell me, if you can, why a southern negro, in his present debased condition, is any more intitled to representation, than a northern Bullock?—Both are mere pieces of property—and nothing more!—The latter is equally a free agent with the former. . . .
