Government Proposed at the Convention

The New Jersey Plan, 15 June 1787

The amendments proposed by William Paterson of New Jersey were far more than “New Jersey amendments.” They represented the views of the delegates from the small states and of those delegates who were opposed to a national government or who at least insisted that the central government must retain some of the federal character of the Articles of Confederation. Nevertheless, they agreed that the central government needed more power and the proposed amendments provided for such power. Among the delegates probably involved in drafting the amendments, in addition to Paterson, were Roger Sherman and Oliver Ellsworth of Connecticut; John Lansing, Jr. and Robert Yates of New York; the Delaware delegates, including John Dickinson; and possibly Luther Martin of Maryland.

On 19 June the Convention approved a motion to reject the New Jersey Amendments and accept the amended Virginia Resolutions. Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia voted for the motion. New York, New Jersey, and Delaware voted against it. The vote of Maryland was divided.
